

Free financial change workshops offered

“Families Responding to Financial Change”, a series of free public workshops, are taking place at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday nights through Feb. 24 at the Glen Rock Public Library.

“Now that the holidays are over and it is clear that people are hurting financially, it’s time to pull ourselves together and learn about resources and coping mechanisms for dealing creatively and compassionately with our new realities,” said series coordinator Barrie Peterson, a former finance columnist for The Record.

On Feb. 17, a panel will address “Making New Career/Retirement Decisions Based on Values, Spirituality and Market Realities.” The series will conclude on Feb. 24 with a consideration of unmet needs and an identification of opportunities for ongoing mutual aid and self help.

The “Families Responding to Financial Change” series of workshops is sponsored by The SOURCE—Family Support Group, in cooperation with the Glen Rock Public Library, the Interfaith Religious Leaders of Ridgewood, the Community Resource Council, Bergen County’s United Way, Bergen Community College Continuing Education—Corporate and Public Sector Training, the Bergen One-Stop Career Center, the Bergen Workforce Investment Board, and by Valley Hospital. For more information, call Jean Baker Wunder at The SOURCE, 201-670-4673. Reservations are suggested.

Printing imperfections present during scanning

